I have to say, I'm a sucker for "lifestyle" books like Kinfolk that have pretty pictures of completely unobtainable life scenarios, but because of how inaccessible the "lifestyle" they're showing tends to be, they usually end up collecting dust on my coffee table. THIS BOOK is so different. Not only are the photos, crafts and ideas beautifully shot (and equally as deserving of a front-and-center coffee table spot), but the author is one of the most honest, articulate and REAL people I've ever encountered in this kind of book. Rather than presenting recipes or crafts that would require a culinary degree or access to obscure ingredients someone like me would never know how to obtain, she lays out easy to follow recipes with helpful hints about where to locate each ingredient or item.

It's like your best friend is telling you how to make a delicious lemon doughnut or make a DIY candle (that actually looks cute and not DIY). In addition to all of the amazing recipes she's so well known for, Adrianna also acts as a totally down-to-earth life coach (again, in such a real, humble, human way), presenting the kinds of advice or ideas that actually make you think "I can totally do this!" I bought several of these books to give out as gifts for the holidays this year, and I'll probably end up buying even more. Save your money on Kinfolk and buy this book --- on that will probably end up full of greasy finger marks and paint stains because you'll actually use it! Another win for A Cozy Kitchen!

This book is fantastic! Adrianna is such an amazing blogger, and that absolutely translates to her book as well. The layout is organized by seasons, and has a year's worth of recipes, activities, and DIY projects. The photography is beautiful, and the book makes for a very nice addition to a coffee table. Thanks!

This book is one of my new favorites, actually one of my all time favorites. I love how good the food looks, whoever styled it and shot it did a really good job, and I love that the crafts are do-able for just about anybody. I actually liked it so much that I bought two more as christmas presents. Definitely staying on my coffee table for a very long time.

This is a magical book, and perfect for the changing season as we head into colder weather where I live. I love how Adrianna combines food, crafts, decoration, and just good advice for living a healthy and joyful life. Fabulous book. Literally cannot say enough good things about this.

I love this book so much! It's a great option for bundling up everything that's great about A Cozy Kitchen blog in one: you get delicious (and beautiful!) recipes, great DIYs and tidbits about life and really, how to push yourself to be creative and enjoy what's around you. I got two of these books; one for myself and one for a gift!

Super Cute book! The writing is very clever and witty. I also like the layout, starting in the winter and changing with the seasons. I find myself laughing with her little intros and stories before recipes and ideas. Great Job!

This is a beautifully designed book filled with fun and original recipes. Along with seasonal recipes are easy cool crafty projects to make your home, spirit and canine happy. There's finally a yummy Shrub recipe(s) I really think I'll enjoy preparing for my friends. I love this book!

I can't lie I purchased this book based solely from the title. Upon reading the title I envisioned being curled up, with a cable knit throw, sipping on a chi tea latte.. and that is how my purchase happened. I have yet to make my dream a reality but I must say it adds great character to my coffee table. It includes various recipes and crafting projects that I truly can't wait to try. The photos are great too. I love that it encourages "cozy-ness" and enjoying the small things... Long story short a great read for someone wanting to add some cozy to their lives...
